A. Fundamental Principles 1

The practicalities of contract drafting 1

- § 1 Use your skills the best you can in the circumstances. 1
- § 2 In your general approach, avoid “extreme drafting” that puts an unreasonable onus on the counterparty—especially if the contract is part of a long-term relationship. 4
- § 3 Know what you want to say. 6
- § 4 Learn to review a contract knowledgeably and efficiently. 9
- § 5 Establish efficient protocols for working with counterparties. 10
- § 6 Date your drafts. 10
- § 7 Retain the final, signed version with the permanent client file in a separate, conspicuously marked folder. 12
- § 8 Adhere most strongly to the conventions recommended in this book when you’re the principal or responsible drafter. 12

Exercises for the Practicalities of Contract Drafting (§§ 1–8) 14

Accuracy 16

- § 9 Be alert to errors, misstatements, and ambiguities. 16
- § 10 Avoid inconsistent usage. 22
- § 11 Avoid out-of-date or error-ridden forms. 26

Exercises for Accuracy (§§ 9–11) 28

Clarity and readability 33

- § 12 Use plain English. 33
- § 13 Stick to normal syntax. 41
- § 14 Furnish abundant headings. 44
- § 15 Phrase headings to help readers find the information they want. 49
- § 16 Check and, if necessary, improve your average sentence length. 57

Exercises for Clarity and Readability (§§ 12–16) 60

Conciseness 66

- § 17 Tighten the prose. 66
- § 18 Condense phrases into words when possible. 70
- § 19 Adopt sensible positions on doublets and triplets of the legal idiom. 72
- § 20 Eliminate zombie nouns. 74
- § 21 Avoid unnecessary detail. 77
- § 22 Use general terms for general ideas when the terms are clear. 81
- § 23 Minimize the duplication of ideas. 85

Exercises for Conciseness (§§ 17–23) 87

Imposing a consistent numbering system 92

- § 24 Adhere to an exacting system of indented sections and further subsections—preferably the one explained below. 92
- § 25 Impose consistency in numbering. 99
- § 26 Avoid romanettes except as a last resort. 102

Exercises for Imposing a Consistent Numbering System (§§ 24–26) 108

Standard sections and clauses 114

- § 27 Streamline your preamble and (if you include them) recitals. 114
- § 28 Establish the background of the contract (the recitals) as briefly as possible in separate sentences. 117
- § 29 Use a consideration clause that simply betokens a promise for a promise—unless the consideration for covenants is obscure. 124
- § 30 In the body of the contract, state in precise, readable language the promises, rights, conditions, authorizations, and representations. 126
- § 31 Understand the distinct purposes of representations and warranties, and express them well. 127
- § 32 Omit the traditional testimonium clause. 132
- § 33 If you must incorporate by reference, do it straightforwardly. 133
- § 34 Adopt default wordings for housekeeping clauses. 134

Exercises for Standard Sections and Clauses (§§ 27–34) 139

B. Formatting 145

Understanding the basic decisions 145

Hanging indents 147

- § 35 Commit to using hanging indents that cascade from the left margin. 147
- § 36 Prefer rectilinear indents of the kind illustrated throughout this book. 149

Fonts 153

- § 37 Prefer a serif font. 153
- § 38 Use a font size of 10–14 points. 155
- § 39 Use smart quotes and smart apostrophes. 157

Emphasis in text 158

- § 40 Boldface your headings. 158
- § 41 Never use underlining. 161
- § 42 Forswear all-caps text. 163

Spacing 169

- § 43 Single-space your documents. 169

- § 44 Keep within a range of 45–90 characters per line. 174
- § 45 Prefer one forward space between sentences, not two. 176
- § 46 Use white space intelligently. Detest density. 178
- Exercises for Formatting (§§ 35–46) 184

C. General Conventions 189

Obligations and prohibitions generally 189

- § 47 Adopt a rigorously consistent approach to modal verbs, preferably excluding the word shall. 189
- § 48 If you must use shall—either because of institutional pressures or because of personal preference—ensure that it's always replaceable with either “has a duty to” or (less stringently) “is required to.” 200
- § 49 Avoid language of agreement once the terms begin. 202
- § 50 Eliminate may not. 206
- Exercises for Obligations and Prohibitions Generally (§§ 47–50) 207

Party names 216

- § 51 Prefer real names for the parties. 216
- § 52 Never use a set of -or / -ee correlatives. 218
- § 53 Banish party of the first part, etc. 222
- § 54 Consider using first- and second-person pronouns (we and you) in employment contracts, consumer contracts, and the like. 225
- § 55 Avoid first-person ghostwriting for a counterparty. 227
- § 56 Never put parties' names (or other words) in all-caps text. 230
- Exercises for Party Names (§§ 51–56) 232

Dating the contract 235

- § 57 Understand the conventions about effective dates, signing dates, and backdating. 235
- § 58 Consider putting the effective date in the preamble. 239
- § 59 Be careful with dated signatures. 240
- § 60 Consider an effective-date clause. 243
- § 61 Be savvy about other dates mentioned in the contract. 245
- Exercises for Dating the Contract (§§ 57–61) 247

Grammatical number 250

- § 62 Prefer the singular over the plural if it's a realistic option. 250
- § 63 Avoid parenthesized singular/plural alternatives. 252
- Exercises for Grammatical Number (§§ 62–63) 254

Tense 257

- § 64 Prefer the present tense when a provision can be worded naturally in the present. 257
- § 65 For a condition precedent, default to the present-perfect tense. 259
- Exercises for Tense (§§ 64–65) 260

Voice 263

- § 66 Prefer active voice over passive voice. 263
- § 67 When feasible, replace passive voice with an adjective. 267
- § 68 Use passive voice in limited circumstances. 269
- Exercises for Voice (§§ 66–68) 271

Positives and negatives 274

- § 69 Prefer positive statements over negative ones. 274
- § 70 Use negative statements when necessary. 276

Gender-neutrality 277

- § 71 Strive to achieve invisible neutrality. 277

Numbers, percentages, and currency 283

- § 72 Prefer numerals over written-out numbers. 283
- § 73 Don't use word-numeral doublets—a hallmark of amateurishness. 286
- § 74 Prefer the percent sign (%) and section sign (§) over the words. 290
- § 75 Scratch “.00” on round dollar amounts. 292
- § 76 Use calculations, diagrams, charts, and other graphics when they help clarify complicated information. 293

Cross-references 296

- § 77 Eliminate cross-references if you can readily do so through reorganization. 296
- § 78 Use the power of your computer to update cross-references automatically, but check cross-references manually before the documents are signed. 298
- Exercises for Positives and Negatives (§§ 69–70), Gender-Neutrality (§ 71), Numbers etc. (§§ 72–76), and Cross-References (§§ 77–78) 299

D. Structure 305

Organization 305

- § 79 Provide a table of contents for any contract of six or more pages. 305
- § 80 Arrange provisions sensibly. 308
- § 81 Group related items together. 312

Structural divisions 315

- § 82 Use subparts to maximize readability. 315

- § 83 Observe the two-part requirement for subdivided provisions. 320
- § 84 Streamline and simplify references to structural divisions. 321
- Enumerations 324
- § 85 Set off enumerated items as distinct subparts. 324
- § 86 To enhance readability, consider using an appositive to foreshadow an enumeration. 327
- § 87 Put enumerated items in parallel form. 329
- § 88 Observe the principle of economical parallelism. 331
- § 89 Avoid unnumbered dangling flush text. 335
- § 90 Use bullets when desirable. 339
- § 91 Use lowercase at the outset of subparts that are technically continuations of the sentence. 343
- § 92 Avoid unhelpful enumeration, or “splintering.” 344
- Exercises for Organization (§§ 79–81), Structural Divisions (§§ 82–84), and Enumerations (§§ 85–92) 345
- Key terms and their definitions 357
- § 93 Be a minimalist when it comes to definitions. But if you introduce a defined term, use it consistently. 357
- § 94 Employ precise definitional terminology. 364
- § 95 Avoid tag-on defined terms—those included in parentheses after the term being defined. 366
- § 96 If you define a term, use an everyday shorthand name for it. Avoid alien-sounding acronyms and initialisms. 368
- § 97 Define terms in the singular, not the plural. 370
- § 98 Make your definition a literal substitute for the term being defined. 371
- § 99 Never use a completely counterintuitive definition. 372
- § 100 Avoid tautologies in defining. 373
- § 101 Don’t put substantive provisions within definitions. 374
- § 102 Collect in one place the definitions for terms that appear throughout the document. Put provision-specific definitions in their place—using the definition section as an index to find these particular definitions. 375
- § 103 Prefer putting a long definitional section at the end of the document—unless you have just a few definitions. 378
- Exercises for Key Terms and Their Definitions (§§ 93–103) 380
- E. Syntax 385
- Kernel sentence parts 385
- § 104 Keep the subject and the main verb reasonably close together. 385
- § 105 Keep the main verb and its objects pretty close together. 387
- § 106 Renounce the idea of putting all qualifications into one sentence. 388
- Principle of end weight 390
- § 107 Understand that in English, the end of a sentence is the greatest position of emphasis. 390
- § 108 Understand that within a sentence containing set-off enumerations, the end of each provision is a position of emphasis. 391
- Exercises for Kernel Sentence Parts (§§ 104–106) and End Weight (§§ 107–108) 396
- Conditions—in general 403
- § 109 Use if as the default term for creating conditions. 403
- § 110 Unearth hidden conditions to make them explicit, using the word if. 404
- § 111 If a condition is relatively short and seeing it first would help the reader avoid a miscue, put it at the beginning of the sentence. 406
- § 112 If a condition is long and the main clause is short, put the main clause first and move directly into the condition. 407
- Exercises for Conditions (§§ 109–112) 411
- Exceptions 417
- § 113 Use except or unless as the default wording for an exception. 417
- § 114 If an exception needs to be understood before the sentence can be easily read, state it briefly at the beginning of the sentence. 418
- § 115 If an exception cannot be stated briefly, or if it refers to truly extraordinary circumstances—and hence no miscue is likely—put it at the end. Or start a new sentence with But. 419
- Exercises for Exceptions (§§ 113–115) 420
- Provisos 423
- § 116 Reword every instance of provided that. 423
- Exercises for Provisos (§ 116) 429
- Interruptive phrases 433
- § 117 Avoid subject-verb and verb-object separation. 433
- § 118 Split the verb phrase if you must insert an adverbial phrase. 434
- Exercises for Interruptive Phrases (§§ 117–118) 437
- Modifiers 441
- § 119 Put related words together. 441

- § 120 Reword when moving the modifier doesn't make the meaning clear. 442
- Exercises for Modifiers (§§ 119–120) 443

Prepositional phrases 446

- § 121 Minimize prepositional phrases generally. 446
- § 122 Minimize of-phrases in particular. 447
- § 123 When you can, change a prepositional phrase to an adjective. 448
- § 124 When you can, change a prepositional phrase to a possessive. 449
- Exercises for Prepositional Phrases (§§ 121–124) 450

Punctuation 453

- § 125 Learn and use standard punctuation. 453
- § 126 Place a colon before an indented enumeration. 453
- § 127 Put a semicolon at the end of each nonterminal part. 454
- § 128 Place a comma after an introductory phrase or subordinate clause. 455
- § 129 Use the serial comma as well as the serial semicolon. 456
- § 130 For important interpolations within a sentence, use the double-dash construction. 457
- § 131 Don't hyphenate most prefixed terms. 459
- § 132 Avoid comma splices and other common punctuation errors. 461
- § 133 Hyphenate phrasal adjectives. 463

Capitalization 466

- § 134 Capitalize defined terms to signal that they've been defined. 466
- § 135 Capitalize the word agreement when referring to the very contract into which the parties are entering. 468
- § 136 Otherwise, adhere to the capitalization rules for Standard Written English. 469
- Exercises for Punctuation (§§ 125–133) and Capitalization (§§ 134–136) 471

F. Words and Phrases 479

Big words and unnatural idioms 479

- § 137 Prefer the familiar word to the unfamiliar. Avoid legalese. 479
- § 138 Avoid unnatural idioms that typify legalistic writing. 488
- Exercises for Big Words and Unnatural Idioms (§§ 137–138) 489

Pronouns and their antecedents 495

- § 139 Use pronouns when it's natural to do so and the construction is unambiguous. 495
- § 140 Ensure that every pronoun has an antecedent. 497

- § 141 Ensure that every pronoun agrees in number and person with its antecedent. 498
- § 142 Avoid cataphora—using a pronoun before telling the reader what its referent is. 500
- Exercises for Pronouns and Their Antecedents (§§ 139–142) 501

Relative pronouns 504

- § 143 Distinguish between that and which. Avoid the nonrestrictive which. 504
- § 144 Eliminate remote relatives. 507
- Exercises for Relative Pronouns (§§ 143–144) 509

Conjunctions 512

- § 145 Use and and or advisedly. 512
- § 146 Use but instead of and to introduce a contrasting idea. 513
- § 147 Prefer But or Yet over However as a sentence-starter. 514
- Exercises for Conjunctions (§§ 145–147) 515

Usage 518

- § 148 Pay special attention to certain wordings. 518
- § 149 Avoid these “forbidden words and phrases.” 538
- § 150 Know where to find answers to usage questions not covered here. 589
- Exercises for English Usage (§§ 148–150) 590
